

EXTENSIVE DEPOSITS
SODIUM SULPHATE IN THIS DISTRICT

In view of the fact that Geologist J. Williams some years ago discovered and proclaimed a vast deposit of hydro-sodium sulphate in the Baxter Lake area, just north of town, the following article by Mr. L. Cole, B.Sc., of the Federal mines branch, and published in "Natural Resources" should be read with interest:—

The prairie provinces of Canada represent a vast area of agricultural land and up to the present time have not been considered seriously as probable contributors to the mineral wealth of the country. Recently, however, the resources of these provinces in nonmetallic minerals, such as clays, coal, oil, gas, and sodium and magnesium, have been attracting the attention of capital with the result that considerable activity is evidenced in all

The steadily increasing interest in the sodium sulphate deposits induced the mines branch of the department of mines, Ottawa, to institute a detailed investigation of such deposits to determine, if possible, the economic value and the extent of reserves. The work has been in progress during the field seasons of 1921, 1922, and 1923.

Natural occurrences of soluble-mineral salts are known in the provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia, either in the form of bedded deposits or as brines. Some are of considerable extent and are probably of sufficient size to warrant commercial exploitation, provided economic methods of recovery can be developed and markets secured.

Two of these deposits are being operated and plans are under way for the opening up of other deposits, Salts and Chemicals, Limited are operating a deposit of sodium sulphate from the bed of Muskeki lake, 23 miles west of Humboldt, Saskatchewan. The crude salts, running approximately 95 per cent hydrous sodium sulphate, are harvested in the winter months and placed on stock piles from which they are later treated in the company's drying plant on the property. The crude salts are treated, reprecipitated in the anhydrous form and dried ready for the market. The capacity of this plant is 100 tons of dried salt ready for shipment per day of 24 hours.

Deposits of natural sodium sulphate are known at many localities in Western Canada and number of these are of large extent. The deposits vary in composition but they are essentially mixtures of hydrous sodium and magnesium salts with small percentages of calcium sulphate.

The main market for sodium sulphate in Canada at the present time is with the paper mills, which use between forty and fifty thousand tons each year in the manufacture of kraft paper. A small tonnage of the hydrous crystals as taken from the lakes is marketed for use in the tinning and

The work so far carried out by the Mining Branch has necessarily been mines branch has necessarily been confined to only a small proportion of the total number of the deposits known; nevertheless, a quantity in excess of 50,000,000 tons of hydrous sodium and magnesium salts have been proven, and the prospects are that this figure will be greatly exceeded as the

The operations of the companies mentioned above create the possibility mentioned above (and the possibility of other deposits being opened up in the near future) should bring the mineral possibilities of the western provinces before the public and should form the nucleus of an industry which in time should prove a great importance to the whole of Canada.

Alberta Butter is

Pleasing Trade in Britain

The Market Examiner says that writing from England, in reference to shipments of Alberta butter to the British market during the season, one prominent broker states as follows:

We have had several good sized shipments from Alberta creameries over the Panama route this year and are pleased to say that in every case we have had entire satisfaction with this butter. ... The product itself has been without question the finest we have received this year from Canada. The texture of your Alberta butter is in their opinion (the blenders) far superior to that of any other province in Canada.

"Captain Blood"

BUCCANEER

"CAPTAIN BLOOD, BUCCANEER," a Vitaphone picture with J. Warren Kerrigan in the title role, is an adaptation of this thrilling novel.

"I was expecting him," said Blood.

"Fetch him in."

Blood signaled to the servant, who was standing behind Bishop.

"Set a chair for his lordship's boat ashore. Tell them he'll not be returning yet awhile."

"What's that?" cried his lordship.

"Blister me! D'ye mean to detain me?

"Just to make myself and my lads here safe from Colonel Bishop's gallows. There's a note from his hand gone ashore to summon the Harbor Master, and the Commandant of the fort. Once they are aboard, I shall have all the hostages I need for our safety."

"You fool," his lordship said. "Do your dream that I came aboard your pirate ship without taking my measure? I informed the Commandant of exactly how you had compelled Colonel Bishop to accompany you. Judge now whether he or the Harbor Master will obey the summons, or whether you will be allowed to depart as you imagine."

"I'm sorry for that," said Blood.

"But not on my own account. It's the Deputy-Governor there I'm sorry for D'ye know what ye've done? Sure now, ye're very likely hanged him."

"My God!" cried Bishop in a sudden increase of panic.

"If they so much as put a gun across my bows, up goes their Deputy Governor to the yardarm. Your only hope, Colonel, lies in the fact that I shall send them word of that intention

And so that you may mend as far as you can the harm you have done, it yourself shall bear them the message my lord."

"I'll see you damned before I do fund his lordship."

"Why, that's unreasonable and unreasonable. But if ye insist, why, another messenger will do as well, and another hostage aboard—as I had originally intended—will make my hand the stronger."

"Aye, in God's name, go, my lord," spluttered Bishop. "And make your self obeyed."

Lord Julian bowed stiffly to the coverous Deputy-Governor. "You understand, sir, that I do as your desire," he said coldly.

"Aye, man, aye!" Bishop assented hastily.

"Very well," Blood escorted Lord

Julian to the entrance ladder at the foot of which still swung the Arabella's own cock-bat.

"It's goodbye my lord," said Blood.

"And there's another thing," he proffered a parchment. It's the commission. Bishop was right when he said it was a mistake."

"I am sorry," Lord Julian said sincerely. "I still do not perceive—blister me if I do!—why you should not have found someone else to carry your message to the Commandant, and kept me aboard as an added hostage or his obedience to your wishes."

Blood's vivid eyes looked into the other's that were clear and honest, and he smiled a little wistfully. A moment he seemed to hesitate.

"Why shouldn't I tell you? It's the same reason that's been urging me to pick a quarrel with you so that I might have the satisfaction of slipping a couple of feet of steel into your vials. When I accepted your commission

I was moved to think it might redemme in the eyes of Miss Bishop—for whose sake, as you may have guessed

I took it. But I have discovered that such a thing is beyond accomplishment."

"Then with Blood dead, perhaps she will come to her senses."

"I should have known it for a sick man's dream. I have discovered also that if she's choosing you, as I be-

On the male of Port Royal under the low, embattled wall of the fort Major Mallard and Lord Julian waited to receive him, and it was with infinite relief that they assisted him from the ship.

"Anyhow, it's not for long," growled the Colonel finding speech at last. No by

"He emphasized the assurance by an unprintable oath. "If I spend the last shilling of my fortune and the last ship of the Jamaica fleet I'll have that rascal in a hempen necktie before I rest!" He had enlivened in his angry vehemence, and the veins of his forehead stood out like whip-

"Come, my lord, we must take order about this, you and I."

They went off together, skirting the redoubt, and so through courtyard and garden to the house where Arabella waited anxiously. The sight of her un-brought her infinite relief, not only on his own account, but on account also of Captain Blood.

"You took great risk, sir," she gravely told Lord Julian after the ordinary greetings had been exchanged.

But Lord Julian answered her as he had answered Major Mallard. "There was no risk in it. So that Blood's ship were allowed to pass the fort, it harm could come to Colonel Bishop. Blood pledged me the word for that."

Very early next morning, before the heat of the day came to render the opport intolerable to his lordship, he escaped her from his window moving amid the azaleas in the garden. He hurried forth to join her. He explained himself by the announcement that he bore her a message from Captain Blood.

"He desired me," he said at last, "to give you a message that should prove to you that there is still something left in him of the unfortunate gentleman that . . . for which once you knew him. It is not easy to stab me it is not. He was a man who deserved well and amongst us we have married his chances; your uncle because he could not forget his rancour, you because having told him that in the King's service he would find his redemption of what was past, you would not afterwards admit to him that he was so redeemed. And this, although concern to rescue you, was the grief motive of his embracing that same service."

She had turned her shoulder to him so that he could not see her face. His lordship's unusual nervousness was steadily increasing. "He thought then Arabella. You heard what I said, what I reported. You did not say that Peter Blood was wrong?"

Gently she sought to disengage her hand, the trouble in her face increasing. A moment he resisted; then, realizing what he did, he set her free.

"Arabella!" he cried on a note of sudden pain.

"I have friendship for you, my lord. But only friendship."

"Is it Peter Blood?"

"Peter Blood?" she echoed. "I do not know," she said, faltering a little

When the Jamaica fleet put to sea some few days later Lord Julian sailed with Colonel Bishop in Vice-Admiral Crauford's flagship. They cruised awhile off Hispaniola, watching the Windward Passage, but they cruised in vain, and after a month of it at least as Colonel Bishop. Yet he bade me depart: not from the fear of consequences or he is above fear, not from any personal esteem for me whom he confessed that he had come to find detestable; and this for the very reason that made him concerned for my safety."

"I do not understand," she said as he paused. "Is not that a contradiction in itself?"

"It seems so only. The fact is Arabella, this unfortunate man has the 'terrenity to love you.'"

She cried out at that, and clutched her breast whose claim was suddenly disturbed. "Go on," she bade him.

"Well, then, he saw in me one who made it impossible that he should win you so he said. Therefore he could with satisfaction have killed me. But because my death might cause you pain—because your happiness was the thing that above all things he desired—he surrendered that part of his guarantee of safety which my person afforded him. If his departure should be hindered, and I should lose my life in what might follow, there was the risk that . . . that you might mourn me. Because of that he bade me leave his ship, and had me put ashore."

She looked at him with eyes that were a swim with tears. "Was he right, Arabella? My life's happiness hangs upon your answer."

"He said that!" she cried. "He did that! Oh!" she returned away, and through the slender, clustering runks of the bordering orangetrees she looked out across the glittering waters of the great harbor to the distant hills.

Thus for a little while, my lord standing stiffly, fearfully, waiting for fuller revelation of her mind. At last it came slowly, deliberately, in a voice that at moments was half suffocated.

"What weighs—oh, so heavily and bitterly—is the thought that but for the words in which yesterday I repelled him, he might have been saved. And now he is lost—back at his outlawry and piracy, in which ultimately he will be taken and destroyed. And the fault is mine—mine!"

"You have no cause for shame," said he. "As for your sorrow—why, if it will afford you solace—you may still count on me to do what man can to rescue him from this position."

"You will do that?" she cried with sudden eager hopefulness. "You promise?"

WAINWRIGHT, ALBERTA NOVEMBER 10th, 1924.

THE PRESS
AND EDUCATIONPublic opinion in England has been keenly stirred by the suggestion of Sir Charles Higham that the columns of the press be used to educate everyone over the age of sixteen. Sir Charles says:
I hope to see the day when the advertising columns of the newspapers of the world will tell the people the advantage of loving one another a fact which the modern church is failing to teach. The people will be taught to-ally, honesty, kindness, charity, and reasonableness; they will be taught what common sense really is and how to apply it; they will be taught in childlike fashion so that they can understand it. In fact, the advertising columns of the newspaper will some day be the educator of every one over sixteen years of age, and so span the years for many a youngster and save him the heartbreaking trials of most of his forefathers.There never was an age when people have been hungrier for knowledge than they are today.But the difficulty with most of us in the lack of time to follow up our interest. One generation has witnessed so many radical changes in scientific social, religious and political thought that constant revision of knowledge and ideas is necessary, and the busy men and women of today are staggered by the formidable array of bulky volumes which record the progress of human thought and discovery.Educationists have in the press a universal medium for the diffusion of knowledge in such a form that it will be humanized.The greatest need of the world today is to know the truth. Why not advertise it as we do soothing syrup and razors?QUICKEST ROUTE TO SUCCESSAny man in business that depends upon public approval and patronage upon his success has a perfectly reasonable method open to him to keep himself and his business before the buying and patronizing public. Advertising is a medium that offers the quickest route to success, and failure to use it can be understood by the average it consigns the whole proposition to early failure. If the public is misinformed or uninformed about a great deal that is offered for sale, the reason largely may be discovered in the lack of proper and sustained advertising. Success is not some mysterious element that chances to drop in here or there to enrich this or that person.
It is a problem that has been solved and you will find in nine cases out of ten, advertising has been the stepping stone.GLIMMER OF LIGHT IN THE FOGAddressing a gathering of business men in Vancouver the other day the new chairman of the Dominion Railway Commission gave the west good cause to hope that by the time the commission has finished with freight rates the situation in this part of the Dominion will not be as difficult as it has been.Mr. McKeown intimated that he and his colleagues realized there were certain freight rate discriminations which worked a hardship to the west.
He said that the railway experts would have to give satisfactory explanations for these or present for consideration amended schedules that would remove them. He suggested that if this were not done it might be necessary for the commission to call for the scrapping of the whole freight rate schedule and the working out of another that would be more equitable.And he stated that it was essential that farmers and business men of the west should have conditions so provided for them that they would be able to live in comfort and prosperity.If that is the goal the new chairman of the board is aiming at the abandonment of the Crow's Nest Pass agreement may turn out to be nothing more than an incident. It is possible the chairman wished to get this agreement out of the way so that the decks would be cleared for action on the whole Dominion freight rates from Shore can be no more or less. Reserving themselves for the commission to call for the scrapping of the whole freight
rate schedule and the working out of another that would be more equitable.The business of making freight rate schedules is one of those things no ordinary man seems to be able to understand. It is a job that is left to railway experts and the ordinary mortal is expected to take the result for granted when it is handed to him. Frequently when he asks for an explanation of seemingly absurd and contradictory regulations, the explanation is more befuddling than the regulations, providing he gets an explanation at all. If the new chairman of the railway commission is able to get from the railway experts such explanations as will putting existing rates, couched in language that can be understood by the average layman, he will have accomplished much. If he is able to get a new freight schedule, more equitable and easier to understand, he will have accomplished a miracle.It is interesting to note in this connection that Sir Henry Thornton element that chances to drop in here
or there to enrich this or that person.
It is a problem that has been solved
ten, advertising has been the stepping stone.

GRISTING

We are prepared to handle wheat as fast as it comes in. We have a stock of "QUEEN OF THE WEST" FLOUR on hand. Last year we gisted over 60,000 bushels of wheat, and let every farmer have his grain home the day he brought it. We return 34 lbs. "QUEEN OF THE WEST" FLOUR and 21 lbs of Bran and Shorts for each bushel of Clean No. 1 Wheat. A hundred flour and more bran and shorts for the lower grades.

Our charges are 30c a bushel or milling. You can pay us cash, or we will take wheat for this.

Any farmer who does not get his year's supply of Flour, bran and shorts from his own wheat makes a big mistake, as the probabilities are that flour will be very much higher and feed be scarce.

returned empty-handed to Port Royal there to find awaiting them the most disquieting news from the Old World. The megalomania of Louis XIV had set Europe in a blaze of war. The French legionaries were ravaging the Rhin provinces and Spain had joined the nations league to defend themselves from the wild ambitions of the King of France. And there was worse than this: there were rumors of civil war in England, where the people had grown weary of the bigoted tyranny of King James. It was reported that William of Orange had been invited to come over.

Weeks passed, and every ship from home brought additional news. William had crossed to England, and in March of that year 1689 they learnt in Jamaica that he had accepted the crown and James had thrown himself into the arms of France for rehabilitation. To a kinsman of Sunderland's this was disquieting news, indeed it was followed by letters from King William's Secretary of State informing Colonel Bishop that there was war with France, and that in view of its effect upon the Colonies a Governor-General was coming out to the west Indies in the person of Lord Willoughby, and that with him came a squadron under the command of Admiral van der Kuylen to re-enforce the Jamaica fleet against eventualities.

Bishop realized that this meant the end of his supreme authority, even though he should continue in Port Royal as Deputy-Governor. Lord Julian, in the lack of direct news to himself, did not know what it might mean. His captains, Flagbroke, Christian and confidential with Colonel Bishop, and receive him, and with them were some hundreds of his buccaners. When they that political events put him in danger plucked him with questions, he had not being retired, was anxious to enjoy them wait the coming Wolverstone the advantages of having a man of who would satisfy their curiosity, and took his way alone to the fine house of Lord Julian's eminence for his relative. M. d'Oseron, there to pay his respects to his friends, the Governor and the Governor's family.

WISE AND OTHERWISE

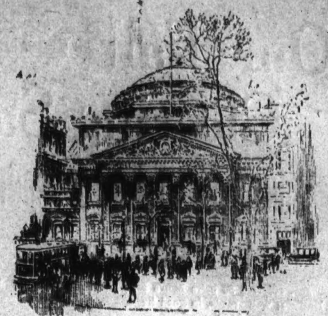

A man bought six pounds of sugar and found it adulterated with sand. The next day he had inserted in the local paper a notice reading thus:—

"Notice.—I bought six pounds of sugar from a grocer in this village. From it I have taken one pound of sand. If the grocer will send me six pounds of sugar I will not expose him."

Next day five six-pound packages of sugar were left at the man's house, there being five grocers in the village.

"Yes," said Mrs. O'Halla. "It was two o'clock the following morning when you came home the other night, and it was half-past two the next morning when you came home last night. But I'm telling you, if it's two o'clock in the morning when you come home to-night, or any other night the next morning, you'll have to get up and let yourself in!"

Newsboy: "Great mystery! Fifty victims!" Passer-by: "Here, boy, I'll take one. (After reading a moment.) Say, boy, there's nothing of the kind in this paper. Where is it?"
"That's the mystery, guv'nor. You're the fifty-first victim!"

Figured in Historic Sod Turning

This antique looking wheelbarrow and spade do not appear capable of very a hefty service now, but nearly half a century ago they carried the weight of a very important event—the ceremony marking the commencement of the construction of the Canada Central Railway through Pembroke, Ontario. Following the ceremony, the spade with which the first sod was turned and the wheelbarrow into which it was shoveled in the presence of a very enthusiastic crowd, were presented to Miss M. P. Moffat, daughter of the Reeve of the village, the lady who performed the ceremony of the naming of the road and christening it with a bottle of champagne. They recently passed into the hands of the Canadian Pacific Railway, which company took over the Canada Central lines in 1911, and will be added to a museum of relics connected with the early days of the railroad which is being formed in Montreal.

So much for the actual ceremony. The Pembroke "Observer" for September 3rd 1875 says: "The assembly then adjourned to a spacious booth that had been specially erected for the occasion, where champagne and beer had been provided for the purpose of drinking several toasts which had been previously agreed upon, by the committee; but a number of individuals, apparently more intent on drinking champagne than doing honor to any toasts, took possession of the tables, and the regular order of the programme had to be abandoned. The Pembroke Brass Band was present and performed some popular airs."

PLAN TO GET HUNGARIANS

Canadian immigration authorities are interested in a movement to bring to northern Saskatchewan, and probably eastern Manitoba, several hundred agricultural workers from Austria-Hungary. The project is being handled by Dr. H. V. Gideon, one of the largest land owners in Hungary and Czechoslovakia, who is now in the west looking over suitable land north of Saskatoon.

Dr. Gideon's land, since the making of the new map, is divided between the two countries and his tenants, settled on several thousand acres, are becoming discontented. If he is successful in disposing of a large portion of his holdings to European government as he expects, he intends to acquire land in western Canada and settle on it hundreds of his tenants who are experienced grain growers and livestock breeders.

Get your storm sash while the weather is fine, from the Atlas, We'll fit you up snug for the winter.
